A CUTTING AFFAIR-A PETERSBURG ARTIST ABROAD-NARROW ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]
DECEMBER 13, 1883. A difficulty occurred at a late hour last night between two colored youths—Charles Todd and Henry Anderson—who were previously warm friends, during which Anderson was stabbed in the left arm. The wound is painful, but not dangerous. The wound is paintin, but not dangerous.

Todd claims that he was acting in self-defence, and that the wound was accidental.

Petersburg has an artist in Houston.

Texas, in the person of a young man named E. C. Mitchell, aged about nincteen years, who left here some months ago to seek his terture in a wider field. He has recently fortune in a wider field. He has recently made a copy of Becker's celebrated picture of Othello recounting the wondrous story of his life to Brabantio and Desdemona, which is declared to be a highly artistic piece of work, and to give promise of dis-tinction in the future. The painting is on exhibition here.

Mr. George Grant, a clerk in the store of Mr. A. L. Fittz, narrowly escaped a very serious accident yesterday by the fall of a well-bucket from its hanging on the ceil-ing. The sharp rim of the bucket struck Mr. Grant on the head, knocking him senseless and cutting an ugly gash in the scalp several inches in length. He is bet-ter today. ROBIN ADAIR. ter to-day.

The report of the lynching of Big and Little Bill Kinney, in West Virginia, is contradicted by a dispatch to the Pittsburgh Dispatch. They were hurriedly removed to a more secure place of imprisonment in anticipation of a visit. The Kinneys are charged with the murder of Benard Doyle and his two little girls in April last. The intended lynching resulted from a failure of the jury to agree upon a verdict in the case of Big Bill Kinney.

Falling Three Hundred and Fifty Feet
A Girardville (Penn.) telegram of the 12th instant says: William Ennis, aged twenty, made a remarkable escape from death at Preston No. 3 Colliery this morning. He and others were descending upon the cage used in hoisting, when they noticed a sudden jerk and what they supposed was the breaking of the rope. Each one looked to his own safety, and Ennis, unacquainted with the working, jumped from the cage and fell headlong about 350 feet down the slope, which pitches seventy degrees. When the others reached the bottom, expecting to pick up his remains in pieces, they were surprised to find him alive, but senseless. He sustained injuries about the head and body, but none are fatal. In his descent he says he was sensible and tried to hold on to timber, rails, and pulleys which he struck, but it was useless. It is said that the accident occurred by the too sudden application of more steam, which caused the jerk of the carriage.
